Management's Discussion of Fund Performance

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

Short Duration Bond Fund (Class R6/JSNRX) returned 5.76% for the year ended May 31, 2024. Short-duration bonds posted solid total returns in the annual period. The asset class was helped by a strong contribution from income at a time in which the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) kept interest rates at elevated levels to combat persistent inflation. Shorter-term debt outpaced intermediate- and longer-term issues, as it was less affected by market volatility associated with shifting expectations for economic growth and Fed policy.

TOP PERFORMANCE CONTRIBUTORS

High-yield and investment-grade corporates | The fund's allocation to these market segments were key to performance as robust investor appetites for both risk and yield led to a tightening of yield spreads, augmenting the benefit of income.

Asset-backed securities (ABS) | A noteworthy position in ABS, while delivering smaller gains, also aided performance thanks to continued strength in the consumer sector.

TOP PERFORMANCE DETRACTORS

U.S. Treasuries | The fund's allocation to Treasuries posted a modest loss in the aggregate.

Commercial mortgaged-backed securities | A holding in the commercial mortgage-backed securities of a California office and retail property experienced losses.
